NEW DELHI: The 26/11 attacks would have featured 12 terrorists had not Lashkar-e-Taiba bosses pulled out two jihadis at the last minute. Sources said two more members - Qasim and Abdullah - were trained and were supposed to enter Mumbai along with Ajmal Kasab and the others.

Abu Jundal has told the interrogators that the 26/11 Mumbai terror attacks would have featured 12 terrorists had not Lashkar-e-Taiba bosses pulled out two jihadis at the last minute.

Syed Zabiuddin Ansari alias Abu Jundal has told his investigators that their training concluded in July-August 2008 but the duo was held back for another attack. "Twelve members were trained by Jundal in speaking Hindi and on understanding the locations of Mumbai," a top official said. Jundal has not disclosed the whereabouts of these two militants.

Giving more details about the control room set up for the 26/11 operation, Jundal has claimed that "call phonics", a US registered software, was used by the handlers to make calls using Voice over Internet Protocol (VoIP). Sources said Lashkar members had bought the software from a shop in Islamabad and it was installed in four laptops kept in the control room along with two TV sets and a satellite phone. The control room was set up on November 25, 2008, a day before the attack, Jundal said.

Sources said calls were made using laptops while the handlers watched the attack live on the TV sets and gave necessary directions to the 10 terrorists. Jundal further disclosed that he had spoken to Abu Fahdullah, who was present at Oberoi hotel, on November 26 and then he spoke to Abu Akasha, who was present at Chabbad House, on November 27. Jundal had given directions to Abu Akasha to kill Jews at Chabbad House and to Fahdullah to kill foreigners at Oberoi, sources said.

Jundal had trained the Mumbai terrorists Ismail, Ajmal Kasab, Ali, Abdul Rehman (Bada), Umer, Musab, Abdul Rehman (Chota), Abu Fahdullah, Umar and Abu Akasha along with Qasim and Abdullah.
