MUMBAI: Petroleum minister Murli Deora on Sunday handed over letters allotting dealership of CNG/petrol pumps to the families of two NSG commandos and 16 state police personnel who laid down their lives while fighting terrorists during 26/11.

Four of the 16 beneficiaries would get CNG stations in the city. The others would get them in places of their choice, said Union petroleum secretary R S Pandey.

Remembering his interactions with slain ATS chief Hemant Karkare and additional commissioner Ashok Kamte, chief minister Ashok Chavan said 26/11 was "unimaginable and unforgettable". "It was as if war was declared on the city. But, without thinking about themselves or their families, these people went ahead because they had love for their country and duty," he said.

The chief minister said handing over land for CNG stations to the martyrs' families was the state's way of helping the families move on.

In an attempt to avoid controversy, Chavan said the allotment of CNG stations and petrol pumps was not a political move to gain mileage.

The family members of police sub-inspector (Naigaon) Bapurao S Durgade said they were happy to get the dealership. "This will help us for the rest of our lives. Both my brother and me are in engineering college, while our mother is a homemaker. We haven't decided on who will look after the station," said his daughter Neelam Durgade.

The family members of NSG commando Maj Sandeep Unnikrishnan, Karkare's wife, Kamte's parents and his wife as well as the daughter of inspector Vijay Salaskar are among the beneficiaries.
