NEW DELHI -- Hours after terrorists began their attacks in Mumbai Wednesday, the previously unknown group identifying itself as "Mujahideen Hyderabad Deccan" sent an email to few Indian media organizations. Indian news channel CNN-IBN provided The Wall Street Journal with a copy.

Some Indian officials have questioned the email's authenticity. One of the attackers, however, called an Indian television station Thursday and insisted on air that he belonged to the group.

The two-page-long letter, written in Hindi peppered with Urdu, is in the form of a notice to the Indian government and a warning to India's Hindus. Its title: "Not the Warning but the Fact."

The following is a partial translation by The Wall Street Journal's Krishna Pokharel:

We inform and warn India's government to stop the continuing injustice against the Muslims. Return all the states seized from the Muslims. We are that "nation" that never forgets its history and repeats its history again and again. The fresh examples of which are Afghanistan, Iraq, Palestine, Somalia and Kashmir.

Whatever you had to do you did that and what we had to endure we endured that &hellip; This is now our innings and we won't let it go from our hands. We will play our innings with style &hellip;

We know India government won't take this warning seriously&hellip;. So we are determined that this warning be made real &hellip; You have already seen its vivid example in Mumbai.

Hindus, don't think India's ATS [anti-terror squad] and army are laced with modern weapons and are also courageous.

This attack is a reaction to those actions that Hindus have been carrying out since 1947. There would be no actions now, only reactions. &hellip; And it will continue till we take revenge for every injustice done to us. &hellip; It will continue till we take back all our seized states &hellip;

Hindus now give up thinking that martyring of Muslims' mosques, weakening Muslims' economic condition through riots, and putting educated youths in prison will weaken the confidence. No, not at any cost. &hellip;
