The sole Mumbai gunman captured alive has told police he was trained in Pakistan and ordered to “kill until the last breath”, according to a leaked account of his interrogation.

Azam Amir Kasab, 21, a Pakistani national, claimed the terror strikes, which left nearly 200 dead, were intended to kill as many as 5,000 people and that he and his fellow militants were ordered to target whites – especially Britons and Americans. The claims were made in what a police source said was a transcript of his questioning.

Kasab was captured after being shot in the hand by police in a standoff near Chowpatty beach, a popular evening destination for local families, in south Mumbai (formerly known as Bombay) on Wednesday night. A policeman and one other terrorist were killed in the same encounter.

Earlier, Kasab and his accomplice had sprayed the concourse of Chhatrapati Shivaji Terminus, Mumbai’s main train station, with gunfire, killing indiscriminately. While there, he was caught on camera wielding an automatic rifle.

The photographs of the boyish gunman, wearing combat trousers, trainers, a black t-shirt and a blue haversack stuffed with ammunition, promise to become a defining image of the assault on Mumbai, the deadliest terror strike unleashed in India in 15 years.

In a statement, Kasab said he had been trained by Lashkar-e-Toiba, a well-known Pakistani-based militant group that has been linked to several operations carried on Indian soil. The group is thought to have been behind the 2001 attack on the Indian Parliament in Delhi, where terrorists stormed the building with guns and grenades, taking hostages as part of a suicidal mission.

The statement said: "I was trained by militants of the Lashkar-e-Tayiba in Pakistan for three months and asked to cause maximum casualties in Mumbai." . . .

*It is possible, however, that Kasab, who was being held in Mumbai's Lamington Road police station, could be administered a "truth serum" -- sodium pentothal -- another method used widely in India but banned in most democracies.

Is it banned in the United States?

I wonder how trustworthy this report is...considering it discusses the number of “bullets” each was issued for his “AK-57” and “automatic revolver.”

I've heard that the lawyers don't want it; but don't know if that is for the criminals or their attorneys.

The Left is concerned about terrorists being tortured in Guantanamo. But its silent when terrorists massacre large numbers of innocent people. I don't understand why they think the human equivalent of the ebola virus deserve to be treated with kid gloves. What's needed is the iron fist!

"...interesting differences in reporting from the London Times."

Perhaps India Times has a different agenda?

Some English papers have reported the Mumbai terrorists were trained in UK.

Both Pakistan and India are members of The Commonwealth of Nations. India has been since independence in 1947.

Pakistan has an interesting history with the Commonwealth:

"1947, left in 1972, rejoined 1989; suspended in 1999, readmitted in 2004; suspended in 2007, readmitted in 2008."

One would suppose a passport issued by UK would be good in the rest.
