From whatever Pooja Bhatt and her husband Munish Makhija say, Headley was a suave, well-built man of about 50. He was articulate, well-informed and a charmer.

Makhija says the six-footer looked like US action hero Steven Seagal and bore no resemblance to the man whose smudged passport pictures are being splashed in the media. Police sources say that Headley, a third-generation American, looked like any other white US citizen.

He was obsessed with fitness and a regular at Moksh, a posh gym opposite the US consulate at Breach Candy. As members of the gym, several American employees of the consulate were on first-name terms with him. When the police checked his membership papers, his photograph was missing. Headley befriended Vilas Warak, a young trainer at the gym, and got acquainted to Rahul Bhatt through him.

Headley befriended Vilas Warak, a young trainer at the gym. It was through him that Headley got acquainted with Rahul Bhatt, also a trainer at the gym. Warak often visited Headley's 3-BHK apartment near the gym.

Though Headley shared the apartment with seven other foreigners, he never introduced any of them to Warak.

The two would go out on weekends. Headley also visited Warak's house once.

"Till recently, Kasab's face came to my mind whenever I thought of terrorists. Now I shudder to think that they can come in the garb of people like us," said Pooja Bhatt.
